U. S. LOSER BIG FEET OF SHIPS

President Alone Can Stop Auction of German Vessels; Total Tonnage 225,000

New York, Feb. 11.—Will President Wilson permit the sale of more than a quarter million tons of former German ships? Marine circles on the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Gulf of Mexico are eagerly awaiting his decision. American independent shipping interests have spent months trying to get the Shipping Board to allocate these ships to American trade routes on both great oceans, sell the ships to the board, and then the ships to the board. Mr. Mann, of New York, a leading independent ship operator, has protested the terms of sale. Mr. Wilson, who has had the sale, has a full appreciation of the situation that the international Maritime Union is to get the ships for about $10 a ton.

The Shipping Board has asked as high as $15 a ton for certain ships. Mr. Mann's testimony last week before the Senate Commerce Committee has attracted wide-world interest to the proposed sale.

OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC FROM SIMON SWIG, VICE-PRESIDENT TREMONT TRUST CO.

Friends: Banking laws should be strict. The care of and investment of the savings of the people are a sacred trust which the laws of the State should, in every way possible, safeguard and protect.

But banking laws are not to be liberal to savings depositors. The men, women and children who, by toil and sweat, save their hard earned pennies and dollars, should be allowed to receive as much interest as their dollars can earn, consistent with sound and conservative principles.

The laws deny them this right. Under the present statutes, if a savings institution from its earnings could pay six per cent to its depositors, its depositors would not be allowed to receive this amount of interest. Five per cent interest is all the law allows. The law does not restrict the amount that can be paid in salaries to officers, or in dividends to stockholders, but does restrict the amount that can be paid in interest to depositors. This law does not seem fair.

If a savings institution from the investments to which they are restricted under the laws, can earn enough money to pay more than five per cent interest, they should be permitted to do so. Depositors should be allowed to share in all the prosperity of the banks, for it is their money that makes banks possible and it is their money that makes the earnings of the banks.

Representative George M. Worrall of Attleboro has introduced a bill in the Legislature known as Bill No. 618 to remove this restriction on the payment of interest. I believe this bill should be enacted.

The law is liberal in another respect. It does not allow the earnings of one interest period to be used to equalize the payment of interest for another interest period.

Let me illustrate. If a savings institution earns enough in its first quarter to pay interest at the rate of say nine per cent, but pays only four per cent to its depositors, it has five per cent of a surplus. Yet if in its second quarter it finds itself unable to pay four per cent, it cannot use any of the surplus funds accumulated in the first quarter, to help pay four per cent in the second quarter.

It is this inability to equalize interest payments that keeps many a bank from paying a larger rate of interest to depositors. There is ever present the fear that the rate paid cannot be uniformly maintained.

In our own experience I found we could pay from our earnings, interest monthly at the rate of five per cent per annum some little time before we did. And although we are not timid, we hesitated to announce the payment of five per cent, for fear that perhaps some month we would not earn such a payment and not being able under the law to use any of our surplus earnings for such purpose, would be compelled to have a varying rate of interest.

But we triumphed over our fears. We announced the five per cent rate and have been able to maintain it.

The will to pay may not be as strong with others as with us. And the law should not help them. Representative Harvey E. Frost of Somerville is trying to remedy this situation by House Bill No. 617 and deserves success.

Depositors deserve a square deal. It will be found supporting every movement that will secure it for them. A hearing will be held on these bills in the early future by the Committee on Banks and Banking, and I urge depositors in all savings institutions to ask their Representatives and Senators for their support of them.

Police of Boston are looking for William Henry Collins, who they claim, eloped from Belfast, Me., last Saturday, with Olive May Robinson, whose age, as given by her parents, is fourteen. Saturday the girl was seen heading a Boston train.

Tuesday Collins applied for a license at City Hall. He gave his age as twenty-four, Miss Robinson as sixteen. He was told to wait until he had a birth certificate for the girl. This he agreed to do and went away. If he returns today it is probable that he will be called to explain his statements.

Collins is described by Assistant Registrar Jeremiah J. Leary as dark, short with the first finger of his right hand missing. He is the son of a farmer and a wife who died. He gave his occupation as shoe worker.

The parents of the girl, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robinson of Belfast, went to that city from Appleton, where the negro came shortly after, from Lubec. The girl was a pupil in the eighth grade. The objection of her parents to Collins' courtship is said to have resulted in the elopement.

Jury Being Picked in Case of John Burke, Accused of Killing Bartley

Southampton, Mass., Feb. 11.—Sixty talemen have been summoned from whom will be picked the jury which will decide the fate of John Burke, who goes on trial here today, accused of the murder of Nelson Bartley of Jacksonville, October 15, last.

Because of the wide discussion of the case in this vicinity it is possible that an extra venire will have to be called before the jury is secured. About 120 witnesses from Jacksonville and the surrounding country are at testify.

INDICTED FOR MURDER.
Burke, when arrested in the lower court, pleaded not guilty, and was held for the grand jury, which returned an indictment against him. R. P. Patterson of Annapolis, recognized as one of the ablest jury lawyers in the state, former County Attorney Thomas Leigh of Augusta and Chester H. Mills of Jacksonville have been engaged as counsel for Burke.

Attorney-General C. M. Sturges and County Attorney E. F. Merrill of Southport will present the case of the state.

Bartley's body was found on Saturday morning, October 15, by Burke's brother, Henry, and B. A. Piper, three and three-eighths miles north of the Moore River Inn, on the Canadian road, in the Sugar Bush woods. Sheriff Moore was notified immediately and went to the scene where he started investigations. Every possible clue has been run down without prejudice.

CLAIMED BARTLEY SHOT HIM.

The investigations revealed that Burke and Bartley, both of Jacksonville, a little while within fourteen miles of the Canadian line in Somerset County, in the Moore River Inn, at Jacksonville together in an automobile on the morning of October 15, 1919. A car, which has been identified as the car in which Bartley used, was seen on north on the Canadian road at the Armstrong farm, which lead into the Sugar Bush woods. At 5:15 p. m. Burke and Bartley were seen at the Armstrong farm, where Burke shot Bartley in the calf of his right leg. Burke told Bartley that he and Bartley shot him, then ran away.

Lawrence, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Allen C. Castle, of No. 5 Hildon road, Andover, believes that the missing Portland Me. minister, the Rev. Myron R. Johnson, who has been sought in this city, called at her house for something to eat.

The police traced his movements to North Andover, where it was learned by them that he boarded a truck owned by a Lawrence man bound for Boston. The Boston police were asked to watch for Johnson.

BABY IN FIGHT

Child Is After Share of Field Millions

My International News Service, London, Feb. 11.—Peggy Marsh, the beautiful young American actress who starred in a romance in the life of Henry Field of Chicago before the latter's marriage to Miss Nancy Perkins, a niece of Vincent Astor, is in not seeking any of the millions of the late Marshall Field in the litigation now pending in Chicago.

Miss Marsh emphasized this fact in discussing the suit which was brought at the name of her three-year-old son, “Tony,” to collect two-thirds of the $10,000,000 trust fund originally set aside by Marshall Field for his grandson, Henry. Henry Field was the father of little “Tony.”

“I was engaged when I returned from Switzerland and saw press dispatches from Chicago which made it appear that I was the plaintiff,” said Miss Marsh.

“I was in 1915, while I was playing in ‘The Girl of the Year’ at the Alhambra Theatre in this city, that I first met Henry Field. We became very much attached to each other.”

“In February, 1917, Mr. Field married and in the following July he died. By his death I lost $25,000 a year, which was the sum set aside for me by an agreement we had, owing to my ignorance of the American law, I had difficulty with a trust fund of $10,000,000 that had specially been created, but none of the matters enter into the court suit at Chicago.”

“There has never been any question of my son ‘Tony’ being the issue of Mr. Field. A guardian, former Governor Edward P. James of Illinois, was appointed for him with the consent and approval of the Field estate, and it is Mr. James who is fighting the case in behalf of ‘Tony.’”

Miss Peggy assumed the name of Marsh when she went upon the stage. Her family name is Orem, and she comes from Chelsea, Mass.

WM. HARRIGAN
DEAD AT 84Famous Old-School Political Opponent of Wilson Once
Elected by Song

Newark, N. J., Feb. 11.—William Harrigan, one of America's most picturesque political characters of the old school, who was swept into the office of sheriff in 1908 by the immense popularity of the topical song “Harrigan! That’s Me,” written by George M. Cohan, died at his home here, aged 84.

Harrigan was the indirect cause of Woodrow Wilson, when governor of New Jersey, forcing the direct primary system upon the legislature in this State. Harrigan opposed Woodrow Wilson in the first presidential nomination for governor, but his delegation was defeated by the winning candidate. This was declared to have been one of the reasons why Mr. Wilson demanded the direct primary.

Harrigan, who was born in Ireland, besides serving as sheriff, also held numerous legislative offices and served in the assembly and board of aldermen during his political career.

MAY FINE FORGETFUL

RHODE ISLAND DOCTORS

Providence, Feb. 11.—Physicians who forget to register births are going to be fined, if the recommendation of the Rhode Island Board of Health is adopted. The board of health says that there are many negligent doctors in the city who pay no attention to the law as far as registering is concerned, all of which they say costs the city $100 each year to try and keep the record in order.

WILSON WAS TOLD

OF SIMS' CHARGES

Washington, Feb. 11.—President Wilson was informed of the alleged statements derogatory to the American army made by Admiral Sims, Representative of North Carolina, told the Senate subcommittee investigating naval affairs.

“I was so impressed with the attitude of Admiral Sims that I informed the President so that he might act accordingly,” Mr. Byrnes said.

CIDER NON-INTOXICATING

Sweet cider hardly comes within the category of intoxicating liquors, in the opinion of the district attorney's office of Suffolk County. As a result James F. Cady and Paul Kincaid, A. J. was drawn in their case. A jury was drawn in their case, but the assistant district attorney announced that the government would not go ahead and the court then directed a verdict of not guilty.

CANADA LIFTS BARS

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 11.—After long delay, certificates enabling citizens of the United States to become naturalized Canadians will be issued in the immediate future. It was learned today. There are said to be about 1,000 citizens of the United States in Canada, desiring to become citizens of this country. The delay was attributed to the State Department at Washington.

"It may attack a man at any age from nineteen to ninety. It is the 'dangerous age' who has thrown you over?"
"Who has thrown you over?"

"Stays with you," speculated the Widow. "Stay away from women until you recover from it. A man in the 'dangerous mood' is in no condition to choose a wife. His vision is blurred with self pity. Any girl who treats him kindly looks just like 'Fate' or a 'delivering angel' to him. But that's when he always does it!" she added sadly. "That is why Reno is so over-crowded today."

Bond Sales in New York

The demand for bonds decreased last month, January sales on the New York Stock Exchange totaling but $12,500,000, compared with $16,500,000 in December. But transactions of 1919 kind exceeded those for the corresponding period a year ago by $15,500,000. Sales of Liberty Bonds for the last month totaled $21,500,000 against $19,000,000 for December. The enormous selling in the latter month was attributed by dealers largely to desire by small holders to obtain money to spend at Christmas.

Materialistic Spirit of Day Reacts on Clergymen

The Rev. John C. Wingitt of Reading, Mass., has written for the Boston Sunday Advertiser an interesting comment on the materialistic spirit of the day. We want to quote him in this column because we agree with him.

The things of the spirit cry out in vain for food before life's bounteous table, where the material-minded fatten in gluttony, greed and avarice. Art museums, with annual deficits, grand opera driven into poverty, school teachers paid less than those who rather poor milk bottles; and ministers, the very trumpeters of spirituality, are one by one being forced, in honor to themselves, their family—yes, to be plain, to their grocery-man—to surrender their calling for a job. I do not know of a single denomination where the ministerial supply is complete. I do know of many denominations where the incomplete supply is decreasing, where those once active are in business, where fewer and fewer aspire to the ministry.

Ministers want to be ministers, they also want to be men. They want to be real men, men who pay their bills, send their children to school, clothe their family, with enough besides to guarantee gray hairs respect.

Come on, people! Let's 'face reality' in this material world and see value in all real ministers of the spirit, both religious and artistic, and be willing to pay for them, else on some future day we will bring all civilization crashing down upon our heads.

Who doubts that this clergyman is right? We are prosperous in America—many of us—but not all. Some of us are very poor indeed. An official investigation in New York found more than two hundred thousand children undernourished because the price of milk and the other essential food put them beyond the reach of the poor.

Although our organized workmen have probably shared better in prosperity of the last few years than any other class except the manufacturers and profiteers, yet there is much discontent among many groups of them because their wages have not kept up with the cost of living. A discontented workman never gives the maximum production needed for the continuance of prosperity.

These are American conditions which cannot continue without harm to the country. Sooner or later the organized workmen with a just demand for more wages or better conditions will get them, for he will have power to compel justice. But the clergyman and the teacher are helpless. They must depend upon the unforced justice of a hurrying nation accustomed to be nagged and urged and forced to consideration of grievances.

The teacher is better circumstanced than the clergyman, for obvious reasons. The clergyman is the most helpless of all.

What ought we to do in such a situation? The answer is not difficult to make. We ought to abandon any idea of pauperizing Europe by giving her charity when she will not work and will not abandon those wars and preparations for war which are keeping her in a state of poverty. There are now more than a dozen wars waging in Europe in which men are dying and men are being kept out of industry and wealth is being wasted, not only as the direct result of fighting, but indirectly by the withdrawal of men from useful industry.

It was quite recently that a representative of the Polish nation in this country complained that the allies were willing to give Poland cotton for gunnison with which to destroy men, but were not giving them cotton with which to make clothes and other useful things, and that in consequence two hundred thousand skilled workmen in Poland were idle who ought to be in the cotton mills. These things are going on all over Europe and America is asked to underwrite them. So far we have refused to do it either through the League of Nations or outside of it.

If we remember that charity begins at home and turn our faces to home necessities, we can find a way to correct the injustice which our clergymen and school teachers and many others are suffering. It ought to be easy to get up a drive to raise a fund for the clergymen. The school teachers do not need it. With intelligent agitation they can get from the public authorities what is just, but the clergymen must depend upon voluntary contributions. There are thousands of men and women who do not go to church for one reason or another, but who believe that churches should be properly supported and who would gladly give for their support.

Let us not forget that it was the American clergy of all denominations, creeds and sects who gave us the great boon of prohibition—the greatest single step of social reform the world has seen in a hundred years.

Let Foreign Interest Pay the Debt We Owe Veterans

To a proverbially ingenious Philadelphia lawyer, David I. Scanlon, Esq., must be attributed an original plan for financing extra pay for veterans of the World War.

Our Congress seems strangely hostile to the widespread public demand for six months' pay. The reason it gives is that a great sum would be required to make this payment.

Mr. Scanlon suggests that the bonuses be paid out of the interest due to the government of the United States on loans to Great Britain and the other governments of our late allies.

And since our Secretary of the Treasury has agreed to waive this foreign interest for three years, Mr. Scanlon proposes that the bonuses be issued in the form of certificates bearing interest at six per cent, this interest to come out of the United States Treasury until the certificates are redeemed.

When the foreign governments begin to pay the interest they owe, Uncle Sam can reimburse himself. He would thus have a material motive for not letting his foreign debtors become care-less about their interest.

The excuse that our nation is too poor to reward its veterans as they deserve is transparently flimsy. But if it intends to collect these foreign debts what better use could be made of the money than to turn the interest on them over to the men who won the war?

More Truth Than Poetry

The New Wonders and the Old

By E. E. Kline

THEY are trying to bridge the gulfs that lie between this world and the great unknown; They hear the voices of those who try To speak from some ethereal zone, And men who are wise cast doubt away, And are sure, at last, that they understand; They have learned a faith that is new, they say, From those who have gone to the Spirit Land; But the word that strengthen me with good cheer Are spoken by one who still is here.

THEY are getting signals from spheres that swing Beyond the sun, through the depths of space, And they try to decipher the words they bring, Perhaps from a high and superior race. The men of science in wonder gaze At planets that never before were seen; Strange currents come from the starry ways, And the world is wondering what they mean. But I, unnumbered among the wise, Still search for faith in two sparkling eyes.

OLD errors die and new truths are learned, Deep mysteries are becoming clear; Outworn conventions are overturned, Men smile at things that they used to fear. Daily new wonders are brought to birth, Others lie just beyond men's reach; But I, being simple and near the earth, Find a greater wonder than spirit speech In the tooth a baby is cutting today And the love that two trusting eyes display.

WELL, IT'S SHORT, YOU KNOW

The people who live in Easy street are always afraid there will be too much crowding for comfort if anybody else gets in.

WHY THIS PERSISTENT NEGLECT?

For some reason the historians have always refused to make any reference to the instances in which conservatism led the way to higher and better things.

HARDLY WORTH THE EFFORT

An Englishman of science says one may prolong one's life by eating a chunk of garlic every day; but why should one wish to prolong one's life if one must lose one's friends?

WHISPER IT GENTLY

When a woman discovers that she is growing old she may be sure that her friends have known it for a long time.

I WAS on a corner.
WAITING FOR A CAR.
AND A BUTCHER ABOUT.
DROVE UP TO THE CURB.
AND THE DRIVER GOT OUT.
AND WENT IN A STORE.
AND A DOG CAME ALONG.
WITH A LITTLE FAT BOY.
AND HE SMILED THE MEAN.
AND SNIFFED AROUND.
AND LOOKED IN THE AUTO.
AND NO ONE WAS THERE.
AND WENT BACK TO THE REAR.
AND SNIFFED SOME MORE.
AND PUT BOTH HIS FRONT FEET.
ON THE AUTO TAILBOARD.
AND SNIFFED AGAIN.
AND WHINED A LITTLE.
AND THE LITTLE FAT BOY.
TRIED TO LOOK IN THE WAGON.
BUT HE COULDN'T REACH UP.
AND THERE WAS A BOX.
IN FRONT OF THE STORE.
AND HE DROVE IT OVER.
TO THE REAR OF THE CAR.
AND CLIMBED ON THE BUS.
AND LOOKED IN THE CAR.
AND THEN CLIMBED IN.
AND ALL THE TIME.
THE DOG WAS THERE.
WITH HIS FEET ON THE TAILBOARD.
AND THE LITTLE FAT BOY.
GRABBED A PACKAGE OF MEAT.
AND TOOK UP SOME CHOPS.
AND HANDED ONE.
TO THE ANXIOUS DOG.
AND THREW THE OTHERS.
DOWN TOWARD THE STREET.

ARE WOMEN WORSE IN MANNERS THAN MEN?

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"HARKEN, brothers! When she who has a right to ask wants to know what is the matter with you, tell her that you have murdered your grandmother, or burned an orphan asylum, or embezzled a hundred thousand dollars. But never say, 'Nothing.' This is not quoted correctly, but is in effect a statement which O. Henry makes in one of his stories, and apparently he voices a fundamental truth.

At least, a letter which I have received seems to corroborate it. The man who has written me tells a mournful tale. He says that his wife has an incurable habit of fault-finding in public. He is not denying that she also takes advantage of a private audience, but he says he could bear that with more or less philosophy. What he does object to is the public pillar, and he wonders if there is any way known to woman by which he may go out with her and feel safe. He assures me that she is quite indifferent to the comments of interested bystanders, although he feels them acutely, and neither the time nor the place mean anything to her. If the mood is on her to quarrel, she does not wait to choose her arena. The subway, the street, the theatre, movies, even church, any place will do.

Husband in Despair
He has tried everything. As O. Henry points out, and as my correspondent's experience has proved, this only adds fuel to the flames; and a soft answer has no power to turn away wrath. Neither have his poor efforts to play the bully succeeded. What, he asks in despair, is a poor man to do?

I am sure I don't know. But I should think he could either refuse to go anywhere with her, or else when he hears the first low mutterings of the storm, he could take his hat and depart, leaving her to follow when she pleased.

When the organized minority of less than five per cent of the people can control legislation, and now threatens to elect a Congress of seceders, it is indeed a national crisis.

It would be a mistake to let five control ninety-five per cent of the country. But what percentage of the total population does Mr. Hannon think is represented in the little group of congressional rulers that have so largely controlled legislation hitherto?

It will be some time before organized labor has "Congressional seats" chewing orders in the Senate or House. But organized farmers have not had a single order in both Houses. Who ever read the famous Standard? The farmers know it.

Organized labor in politics will possess not too much but too little power. On election day working men never stand together. They don't remember their creed; they don't remember their enemies and vote like sheep, following a party emblem as sheep follow a bell warden.

What is needed is a party sans, conservatively radical and progressive, thinking of the country with its hundred million people first, of individuals and groups last. Such a party would exist, made up of all labor, organized or unorganized, of all sorts of farmers and farm workers, of city clerks and little people that eat what the farms produce.

With an organization of labor, of clerks, of farmers, of trades union men, of organized capital can deal easily. Chamber-layers with constitutional infirmities, judges with conventional infirmities, and if the women come in the ward, carefully planned, section laws to make discontent keep its mouth shut, are all at the service of organized finance.

You can't combat an organization of fifty thousand million dollars by organizing any one little group of men. An organization of labor, farmers, clerks and small business men, including about ninety-nine million of human beings, would be the right sort of progressive political party.

But how are you going to combine the ninety-nine million? That they all have the same interests?

And if you could convince them, where would you find men to lead them? Leaders are as important as the crowd that follows. The crowd is always ready to rally the intelligence to unity and even more rarely the intelligence to lead.

An able business man can tell instantly whether business is good or bad by listening to the ring of voices in a big store. The angel Gabriel can tell whether business is good or bad, and Susan also can tell by looking at the new dress on the front page of an average newspaper.

For instance, you could read these heads yesterday, in as much of a newspaper front page as you would cover with one hand:

"Women confesses to killing own child."

"Baited with axes, one dead, four injured."

"Nerve throes shot."

"Committee dies from wounds."

"Smash like a stone to split heads."

"The English divine starts with a handicap."

Our Father, the Sun

50,000 Million Dollars

According to scientists in Paris, our wireless apparatus has been disturbed, not by messages from Mars or Venus, but by electric storms in our similar father, the sun.

Just what the sun is, we don't know. Until lately scientists assumed, foolishly, that it was a huge mass burning up, as coal burns in your grate. Nature works through order, growth, organized life, not through confusion. It was silly to suppose that a great bonfire could be the centre of life's orderly evolution on the planets.

Geologists knew that the sun could not be merely a burning mass, for knowing the sun's size and weight, it was clear that the solar bonfire could have lasted through a period of time long enough to permit of earth's geological changes lasting through scores of millions of years.

When radium was discovered, sending out endlessly its billions of particles with terrific force, it was seen that radium in the sun could explain its fearful, enduring energy. Our sun is a radio-active engine of life.

The storms of the sun's surface are wonderful spectacles, even on prosaic photographic plates, are a queer sort of fire, before which this earth would vanish like a dry leaf on a burning pile. These sun storms electrically send their influence to our earth through ninety million miles of ether.

Congressman Hannon of Texas, worried by the announcement that organized labor is going into politics, says:

"When the organized minority of less than five per cent of the people can control legislation, and now threatens to elect a Congress of seceders, it is indeed a national crisis."
